

Will you ask a question for me? Please?

In this election your vote really matters. We urgently need jobs, a stable economy, and a government we can trust. And we need to build a future for our children.

But now the same politicians who've ruined our country say we must obey the European Court and legalise abortion in Ireland.

That's why unborn children need you to ask your political candidates a question.

We need to build a better future for Ireland. Emigration and unemployment are rising, a savage budget is hurting everyone, and we're being forced to bail out the banks.

In the midst of this crisis, the European Court has ordered Ireland to legalise abortion. And abortion campaigners hope the recession will cause you to forget about the unborn child.

The Labour Party have said that they will introduce abortion-on-demand. Sinn Féin, Fianna Fáil, Fine Gael and the Greens haven't yet published their current position on this vital issue. And they are ALL looking for your vote in the upcoming election.

So, on behalf of mothers and babies, when your candidates come knocking please ask them a question. Ask them to give you a guarantee that abortion won't be legalised in Ireland.

Because mothers and babies deserve better than abortion. And unborn children need you to speak up for them. Their lives depend on it.

FOR A BETTER FUTURE FOR ALL OUR CHILDREN, ASK THE QUESTION, PLEASE.
